Fires are burning across the panhandle of Texas. So far there has been no reports of death losses but likely there will be some that were not able to move.

Expect cash cattle trading to develop late this week. Packers have cut kill to keep from paying up for cattle and they will buy only enough cattle to fill beef orders.

There are fewer cattle and with fewer cattle it is usually supportive for higher cattle prices. But with packers cutting slaughter, they intentionally are curbing the need for cattle. Slowing slaughter puts less beef on grocery store shelves. At the same time consumers want cheaper beef. Consumer demand is going to be the reason cattle prices will go higher or turn away from higher prices.

Look for increasing beef imports of high end beef sections and lower grade beef to meet the demand and at the grocery store to offer consumers a way to buy less expensive U.S. beef. A consumer looking for ways to keep food cost down doesn't care about country of origin. The fast food industry is a perfect example. How many people ask if the hamburger patty is US beef?

Cutting hours and paying union workers guaranteed hours, 32 hours/week, is costly. It is the first step. If numbers don't increase, look for packers to start laying off workers, going to compensation and closing inefficient plants. The smaller regional packers struggling to buy cattle will lose beef orders because they can't supply product and will be the first to close their doors over the big 4 national packers. National packers also have an advantage of importing beef from South America and Australia especially those with facilities in the countries. It is also likely to have packers temporarily shut down for two to three months to renovate and modernize. Modernization will reduce costs as renovation means increasing robotics and less labor.

The pork carcass continues to move up. February has seen best advancements in the carcass from butts, ribs and hams. Strength in hams is coming from exports and butts and ribs from the restaurant and home smokers.

Lean hog trade volume was light Tuesday. April through October Lean Hogs are at premiums to current cash with April $6.44 over the CME Lean Hog Index and June $19.86 over it. Pork has two strong positives. Pork is cheaper than beef and there is a plentiful supply. Retailers can offer pork with low pricing to the consumer and maintain profit margins.

Slaughter is increasing and with packers working in the black they aren't hesitant to pay up for hogs especially with pork prices up better than hogs. Pork prices remain cheap and on the global market pork demand is strong.

Last week hog slaughter compared to last week was down 63,000 head. Compared to the same week in 2023 slaughter was up 69,498 head. Year to date slaughter is up 51,063 head.
